But! Like all good things in the Tudor world, it came to an end During Henry's proposed divorce to Catherine of Aragon, Margaret son Reginald (the church baby who grew up), started flapping his trap about the King.. Anyway, to cut a long story short, Margaret was arrested and taken to the tower and charged with treason in 1539.

They had 5 kids together but when Rich died he left her nothing, literally fuck all so Margaret turned to court for help.. Here is where it gets complicated Margaret was daughter of the Duke of Clarence which made her niece to Richard III and Edward IV.. Margaret was caught up in this wide net and then the northern rebellion sealed her fate.

She was a Plantagenet by birth, (so instantly posed threat to the Tudor throne), and cousin to Elizabeth of York (Henry VIII's Mum).. Further reading: "Margaret Pole, Countess of Salisbury 1473-1541" by Hazel Pierce, "Margaret Pole: The Countess in the Tower" by Susan Higginbotham.. You may not of heard of Margaret Pole so I will fill you in because her death was quite brutal and makes an interesting read, (if you like the darker side of the Tudors).

Margaret Harriett Poole (born Bitton), 1846 - 1929 Margaret Harriett Poole (born Bitton) was born on month day 1846, at birth place, to William Farman Bitton and Jane Bitton (born Evington).. Anyway, Reginald Pole then fuked off to France and remained under protection of the pope , (who shared the opinion that Henry was somewhat of a knob for throwing the word 'divorce' around as head of a catholic country).. I'm sure you have heard of Henry VIII and what a massive git he was, so I'm also sure you can imagine how utterly unimpressed he was with the whole thing.. Henry VII paid for his funeral and put Margaret back onto the Market By now her kids were growing and one of her sons, Reginald, was sent to the church as thanks (he later became the archbishop of Canterbury no less...boy done good).. All was sweet for a while, she remarried and became stupid rich (inheriting the title Countess of Salisbury and owning lands in her own right).. Being a strong woman in the last of the Plantagenet line, I think Henry would've jumped at the opportunity of binning her off, so he waited and waited keeping her and some of her family, under lock and key in the tower.. On 27th May, in 1541 Margaret Pole, niece of Richard III and Edward IV, was executed at the command of Henry VIII.. William was born on April 23 1803, in Hillingdon, Middlesex, England Jane was born on September 29 1805, in Deptford, Kent, England.. He wrote pamphlets suggesting Henry was somewhat of a bellend for crossing the church and denounced his policies as king.. Two and a half years later in 1541, Margaret was taken to the block She was a decrepit 67 year old, but being of noble birth was granted a 'private execution' (just the 150 or so gawpers as opposed to all of London). e10c415e6f
